

H1N1 FLU VACCINATION

Now's The Time! December 4 -8, 2009

FINAL SERIES of Community-Based Public Health H1N1 Vaccination Clinics

People eligible for vaccination at these clinics are those who are at higher risk of getting, spreading, and suffering from H1N1 flu. These priority groups include:

- Pregnant women
- People who live with or care for infants under 6 months of age
- Health care workers and emergency medical service workers
- Children and young adults from 6 months through 24 years of age
- People aged 25 through 64 years with chronic medical conditions

If you are in one of the priority groups and you don't have a regular healthcare provider, you can get vaccinated against H1N1 for FREE. After December 8th, vaccine supplies will be increasing and vaccinations will be available at Public Health Centers, private health care providers, and community clinics.
